Introduction

Welcome to the third edition of Life in Tiles. In this edition we present a selection of tiles that reflect the two distinct and contrasting design trends in 2013. These are:

1. The use of bold colours and textures to create striking fashion forward spaces, and
2. The "inspired by nature" collections of wood and stone-look porcelain tiles, for those more serene and timeless surroundings.

The new Vidre mosaics range offers unlimited design options for those who dare to express their individuality with colour and texture. The use of rich, pearlescent and metallic effect colours used on mass or as accents create truly stunning high impact spaces.

Lineal textures and designs, particularly in large format floor tiles, remain a very popular option for interior spaces. The Tile Depot has just added the gorgeous and versatile Runway series to its range, which is a definite "must see". Runway comes in two large format sizes as well as a mosaic feature tile, ensuring an abundance of design options to suit your needs.

For those seeking more restrained and subtle design schemes there are numerous tile options that re-create the beauty of nature in both stone and wood effect. Porcelain tiles utilising modern design and production techniques to imitate the natural aesthetic and charm of wood and stone, offer a product that is generally superior in its performance and durability than the original natural material.

It's an exciting time for staff and clients alike to explore their creativity and create some truly gorgeous environments. The only limit is your imagination. Please read on and for more information on anything shown in this edition please contact your local Tile Depot store.
